The Mulligan Regiment.

The following officers have been commissioned as Captains to raise companies for the "Mulligan Regiment": M. F. Lockwood, R. F. Farrell, John A. Preston, Henry S. Peal, B. F. Gilman and James R. Burgess, Detroit; Samuel H. Cooper, Monroe; Michael Kelly, Adrian; Cornelius O'Kane, Hudson; Richard A. Laronge, Springwells; Samuel H. Blakeman, Port Huron; and John L. Adams, Toledo; all having military experience, and some having seen actual service.

Captain Lockwood is raising two batteries of flying artillery to be attached to this regiment, and will be ready to go into rendezvous, with his full complement, in a few days.

Captain Burgess is to raise a company of sharpshooters, which he intends and fully expects to have full within two weeks from this time.

Independent of the officers above mentioned—all of whom have given written and verbal assurances that they can raise their companies in a short time—several other gentlemen have applied for commissions as Lieutenants, guaranteeing to bring between twenty-five to forty men each; and they have been so commissioned. These Lieutenants are scattered throughout the State, and when they commence their operations—which they have already—a network of recruiting will overspread the whole State, and from which will be obtained as fine a body of Irish-American soldiers, as any eastern state can yet boast of having sent to the support of the Union, Constitution and Laws of their adopted country.

Much credit is due to Governor Blair for having sanctioned the raising of Irish Regiments, as such; for, by it, the very best material of which an army can be composed, is thus quietly and enthusiastically obtained. We trust to see this regiment, as well as the Irish American regiment of Colonel Sinclair, acquire the honor and reputation worthy the gallant defenders of Lexington. The headquarters, for the present, are in Bagg's building, corner of Jefferson Avenue and Griswold street.
